

The children participate in a flower communion.

Think Easter bunnies and Easter eggs, alleluia anthems and springtime - Easter, both spiritual and secular, is right around the corner – April 4, to be precise – and most UU congregations celebrate or acknowledge the holyday/holiday in some manner.

The Unitarian Universalist Fellowship of Gainesville sent the Breeze an overview of their plans for Easter Sunday, along with photos from Easter 2008.

Jane Edwards tells us that UUFG will host their annual Easter egg hunt, this year sponsored by the 5-8 grade team under the leadership of the 9-12 grade team. The 9-12 grade team will once again organize and host the Easter luncheon as a fundraiser to send them to GA in June. Last year three UUFG youth attended GA in Salt Lake City, and more are hoping to go this year. They have held monthly bake sales, and their GA funds are growing.

Have you ever wondered what the Easter bunny looks like? Now you know.

UUFG young people perform on Easter Sunday. The t-shirts were designed for the youth choir.

(The Breeze invites all northeast UU congregations to send in pictures and/or stories of 2010 Easter activities. Let's share the fun with each other in the April issue, coming up next. The great photos here were taken by Ron Dalton.)

(More about the photo [left] of the chorus. The younger ones are part of the Shalom Singers; those in t-shirts are known as UUFG Beacon Singers.)

If ye seek, surely ye will find. There is always a jar of pennies on the table for a candy buy-back. A penny for a jelly bean!

The egg hunt is over. Let the feast begin – al fresco style...